

A New Kind of Normal

The war is almost two years.

There are still hostages in Gaza.

We wake up, drink our coffee, check the news, and go on.

We've learned to live in a new kind of normal.

But our hearts are broken.

We will not be whole until they all come home.